

Since we are all from Finland, we chose variation 2. Here is our experience working virtually with classmates and colleagues from your own cultural background.

Speed of making decisions	Usually decision making is faster virtually, as you don't have time to chit-chat.
Feeling comfortable in the meetings	Finnish people are known to be shy and quiet, which makes it easy to hide behind the screen. We feel more comfortable at home in our pyjamas when nobody can see. This is why we prefer virtual meetings.
Quality of output	The quality of the task itself can suffer, as we are not as productive working virtually. Lack of conversation leads to lousy output.
